

ABSTRACT

[000243] Described is computing device having a first and a second transceiver for conducting wireless communications over a medium shared with another computing device. Each transceiver is spatially separated from the other transceiver for independent communication over the shared medium. Each transceiver is associated with a different particular transaction that occurs when another computing device interacts with the computing device over the shared medium through that transceiver.

2156918V2